Understanding your PAYCHECK

Gross Pay

The total amount you earn before withholdings

You usually think of it in terms of your salary or your hourly wage

Net Pay

Your take-home pay

It's what's left of your earnings after withholdings have been deducted

Withholdings

The portion of your paycheck that your employer withholds for the government

These can also be referred to as Involuntary or Mandatory Deductions

Deductions

Other, voluntary amounts that are taken from your paycheck

They vary from person to person and are also known as Voluntary Deductions

Your pay stub may look a little different

Keep in mind that your pay stub may use the term “deduction” to refer to both withholdings and deductions

Let's talk

FEDERAL TAXES

Federal income tax is automatically deducted from your paycheck

The amount deducted depends on the federal tax rate as well as how much money you make

FEDERAL TAXES

Your federal tax dollars go toward things like:

Unemployment Benefits

Education

Infrastructure

National Defense

FEDERAL TAXES

The amount of tax withheld on your paycheck might be higher or lower than the actual amount of federal tax due to the government, so you may find yourself owing additional funds or getting a refund at tax time

STATE AND LOCAL TAXES

Depending on where you live, amounts may also be withheld for
state and local taxes

STATE AND LOCAL TAXES

Your state and local tax dollars go toward things like:

Schools

Parks and Recreation

Public Transportation

Low-Income Assistance

FICA

Taxes from the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA)

provide support for disability and retirement as help with medical costs for seniors and those on Social Security

FICA taxes are used for:

Social Security

Medicare

Let's talk

VOLUNTARY DEDUCTIONS

VOLUNTARY DEDUCTIONS

RETIREMENT SAVINGS

Contributions to your 401(k) can be taken directly from your pay

EMPLOYER-PROVIDED HEALTH COVERAGE

This includes premiums for extended medical, dental or vision plans

LIFE INSURANCE

Insurance coverage premiums may also be deducted
